The case is very high value and Victim even had a high ranking MP involved during the case.	Supervising officer - "I have been sitting on this case due to the pressure victim has been putting on the investigation through his continued engagement with his MP. Because of this I do not feel it is appropriate for DC xxxr DI xxxx to keep these gifts although they have done an excellent job with this investigation and obtained charges against the offender. I would point out that this result was going to be achieved even without involvement of the MP, That was just an unnecessary distraction to both DI xxxx as SIO and DC xxxx as the OIC. Had victim not gone to these lengths to put unnecessary pressure on the police I would have likely felt that this was a genuine expression of gratitude."

6529/121	Local Policing and Partnerships	West Division - Commander	Police Constable	30/03/2021	Member of the Public	Yes	15.00	Bunch of Tulips	PC attended the home address of VICTIM OF CRIME in her capacity as a SOLO. A rapport has been built up as the investigation as been going on since December 2019. Victim handed PC the flowers upon entering her address for a capacity assessment on the 19th March 2021. MoP has learning difficulties and PC felt it to be rude to refuse the gift. Flowers were accepted and taken home due to perishable nature of gift.	I acknowledge the gift of flowers was accepted by the SOLO and I understand it would have looked rude not to accept, especially in light of the learning difficulties of the victim in this case who presented the flowers to the officer. Normally in live rape cases I would ask the officers not to accept gifts of gratuity as it could look like we are not acting impartially during a live investigation, and they are normally donated to charities or similar. However in this case, the flowers are perishable and given directly to the officer and I concur that it would have been offensive not to accept in the way the officer has, and am satisfied that accepting these flowers under these circumstances was the right thing to do - DCI

The gift is proportionate given the support provided by DS. To not accept could potentially cause offence and impact upon a well established relationship. It is an excellent reflection of DS's integrity that this was declared at the earliest opportunity in line with Operation Magenta and Kent Police policies.

During an appointment to obtain a MG11 from member of public's wife, MoP left the room for a few minutes before coming back with personalised copies of his book which were published in 2013. The book details his early life as a bass player in a variety of blues bands and his relationship with 'Fender' bass guitars. It is known that MoP often gives visitors a copy of his book. The gifts were unsolicited.	The financial cost of the gift is minimal however the personal value to the author is high and to not accept the gift risks the ongoing professional relationship. I see no ethical reason for the gifts not to be retained. They will be retained by the recipients and not sold or exchanged for gain, financial or otherwise. A/DCI

Whilst there we spoke about her family history and she presented me with the book as I had told her how interesting I found her family history.	The gift is of small financial value but of large sentimental value, to decline risks causing offence and undermining the core principles of families first, risking the trust and confidence of our affected families. 6593/121	Central Operations	Tactical Operations	Police Constable	18/06/2021	Leeds Castle	Yes	48.00	Tickets to access Leeds Castle.	Officer was recently at Leeds castle speaking with Head of Operations who also happens to be a special constable PC and colleague took the time to show him around the ARV and talk with him about the job and role profile of an ARV. At the conclusion he very kindly gave them both a complimentary ticket to LEEDS castle, this was unexpected and officers didn't want to insult his generosity so accepted. Upon conclusion of duties immediately told their supervisor, who said to make sure it was registered on the gift/hospitality register for transparency etc.	CI - "I am aware of this interaction at the Castle. PC XXXX was given two tickets two were also given to PC XXXX, these are speciality complimentary tickets so show no monetary value on them however, research has shown that they have an adult ticket value of £28 each if purchased. The expiry date for the tickets is the 24/04/22. While I understand that both officers have accepted so not to cause offence, I am also aware that they have been handed over from a SC who is also the Head of Operations, who I know we have a good reputation with. I am not aware of any other officers within firearms being given any tickets, and therefore authorised the officers to keep these and use them as they see fit. Although I deem this of a trivial nature, I also deem this inexpensive, as it's a complimentary ticket but I note the low cost face value of £28. Officers have been informed to keep the tickets. CI

Donor wished to thank officers for the work carried out during a investigation of which she is the victim	I am aware of this gesture made by the victim and have consulted policy SOP P02e. I believe this gesture meets the principles of being a genuine offer of gratitude from a victim for the service she received without any encouragement from the officer and would not affect the officer feeling free of any obligation to do anything in return. This is a transparent process and I believe that any reasonable bystander would agree does not compromise any the officer ability to perform his duties.
