Approved for retention by CI
6672/122	Local Policing and Partnerships	East Division - Proactive Investigation	Police Constable	14/01/2022	Member of the Public	Yes	£15.00	70cl Bottle of Gin.	Officer attended victim's property, who has been a victim since October and has tried on previous occasions to give the gift. Officer explained that it is not necessary and whilst a kind gesture, cannot accept the gift. On a victim welfare visit and to provide an update on the investigation, the donor placed the bottle on top of the officer's bag to thank the officer for the kindness and support given.	I can see the officer has quite rightly tried to decline the gift on several occasions. To return the item may now cause upset to the victim as it has already been declined several times to no avail and victim was quite insistent. I suggest the item be passed to a charitable cause, perhaps raffle when the opportunity arises. DCI

Wallet was handed in as 'found' property. Letter sent by PEO advising him of it. He wanted to say thank you to us for contacting him.	I have reviewed this and in these circumstances, I believe that a small box of biscuits have been provided to show their thanks for the recovery of the wallet. I do not see any wider issue with retaining these and sharing with staff locally within Dover, as expected by the donor. These are not of high value and more for appreciation - Nice to receive from the public. Ch/Insp

We had a two course meal with soft drinks, no alcohol was purchased or consumed. At the end of the meal we asked for the bill and PSE said she had paid for the meal in recognition of us working together. I asked if officers were happy to accept this very kind gesture and they agreed they were. I said I would record this on the Gifts and Hospitality Register. 6693/122	Local Policing and Partnerships	East Division - Reactive Investigation	Detective Constable	07/06/2022	Member of the Public	No	£50.00	Thank you card and a Fenwicks Gift Card.	DC received a card from past victim thanking her for believing in her and doing a thorough investigation. She included a £50.00 Fenwicks Gift Card.	Initially accepted. However, whilst a very kind generous offer from the victim, this is excessive and is not ethical to benefit from. If a small gesture such as flowers, I would be in agreement but this is excessive and valuable from a vulnerable victim. Discussed with Supt who is in agreement, this is not suitable for the officer to personally accept. Suggestions - a supervisor to engage with the victim and discuss an option to return or accept and donate to a charitable organisation to perhaps raffle. Member of public was informed and understood. The gift card was returned to her, via Recorded Delivery. DCI
6694/122	Local Policing and Partnerships	East Division - Reactive Investigation	Detective Constable	15/06/2022	Member of the Public	Yes	595 Rupees	Book - The Constitution of India by Doctor B.R. Ambedkar.	Victim and her family gave DC the above book, as a gift for working on the investigation	I am content with the officer accepting this gift from the victim. To return, would potentially culturally offend and in addition, it is valued at just over £6.00. DCI

They also received a thank you card	This has been a significant case for Kent Police insofar as who the victim was - a Kent PCSO. The family have been supported throughout this challenging investigation by the aforementioned members of staff. I am therefore satisfied in the circumstances this gift, which was handed over at the time of sentencing the defendant is appropriate in the circumstances and I therefore agree these can be retained

Whilst speaking to the informant how we can try to help her grandson gain employment, we managed to get off topic and start to talk about food, PC mentioned that he has a friend whose aunty made jalebi that he liked it as it was really sweet. MoP joked with PC before saying she wanted him to try another sweet which was not as sweet that she had left over from a wedding. She presented a small box of sweets containing 6 sweet balls and insisted that we take them to try. It was explained to her that PC didn't want to accept the sweets however she insisted and wouldn't take no for an answer she placed the box in the officers hand before he left.	Left in office.

6707/122	Central Operations	Tactical Operations	Police Constable	10/08/2022	Member of the Public	Yes	£4.00	1 x Iced Coffee	A MOP was stopped and reported for not having insurance. The MOP worked in the local hospital, very close to where she had been stopped. Whilst with the MOP, I aided her trying to organise a new insurance policy so that she could continue her journey to work. Whilst with her she received a Deliveroo delivery of a set of iced coffees which she stated she had purchased and arranged prior to her being stopped. She stated that these had been purchased for her colleagues in a meeting she was due to be attending. She stated that due to her having been stopped, she would no longer be able to make this meeting and so the coffee's would be wasted and that she as planning to throw them in the bin. She offered a coffee which was initially rejected by me, though after being pushed I accepted it. I considered Policy GIFT - and was happy that her gift was genuine with no ulterior motive, that it was not going to affect my decision making in this situation, that she was not expecting anything in return for it and that I was comfortable that this could be transparent.	Refreshment was accepted by the officer and under the circumstances outlined above I am confident that it was done so without affecting his decision making or impartiality. I understand that refusal may have caused more offence than acceptance. Authorised by CI

They gave us doughnuts that were due to be thrown away	I was approached by the officers in receipt of this gift prior to any decision being made. While the sale value was £72, these products had expired and were awaiting disposal and no resale value. The items were offered to the officers after they attended and dealt with the matter in hand and not prior therefore there is no suggestion that this gift was in exchange for services provided. Given the nature of the gift was perishable, goods there was no capacity for Kent Police to donate to another cause. The owner of the goods was commercial and has produced and not purchased the goods. Given the goods had expired permission was given to officers to consume the gift if they so desired at their own risk
